Meet the leader...

1. What is your current occupation and company?

“I currently serve as the World Economic Forum Program Lead and Global Partnerships Manager at Deloitte, where I lead and support engagement surrounding its year-round initiatives and annual meeting in Davos, Switzerland.”

2. What is your fondest memory from your time in FBLA?

“Some of my fondest memories are traveling to national conferences and competitions while building friendships with students from across the country, especially during my time as a national officer. Many of those experiences and relationships have stayed with me long after FBLA.”

3. How did FBLA prepare you for your career or life in general?

“FBLA gave me a foundation in public speaking, leadership, work ethic, and working effectively with people from different backgrounds. It also taught me how to step outside my comfort zone, build relationships, and confidently represent something bigger than myself.”

4. What is your best piece of advice for current students?

“Get involved in more than just the tests! Make your time count by going to the conferences, meeting new people, running for a leadership position, and saying yes to opportunities that push you.”

5. Is there any additional information or thoughts you would like to share?

“FBLA played an important role in shaping who I am personally and professionally. Looking back, I’m especially grateful it gave me opportunities to lead, travel, speak, and build relationships at such a young age. Those skills and experiences continue to show up in my career today.”
